Sustainability Reporting Boundaries

Question

Does the company report on the scope or boundaries of its sustainability disclosure?

Rationale

Setting clear sustainability reporting boundaries is necessary for stakeholders and investors to understand how the sustainability disclosure of a company reflects its organizational and management reality. The greater the scope of the information is disclosed, the more it is representative of a company's business activities as a whole, providing a more accurate picture of the environmental and social impacts of the company. Because of this, stakeholders and established standards and frameworks are expecting companies to increasingly align their sustainability disclosure with the boundaries set for financial disclosure.

Key Definitions

Financially consolidated activities: refer to all subordinate entities, subsidiaries, etc. that the company has consolidated in its financial statement. Financial accounting standards require reporting companies to consolidate all entities that they control.

Operational control: an organization has operational control over an operation if the former has the authority to introduce and implement its processes and operating policies.

Majority-owned activities: subordinate entities or subsidiaries in which the reporting company (e.g., parent company) owns more than 50% of outstanding shares.

Disclosure Requirements

- This question requires supporting evidence from the public domain. The information provided has to be included in your public reporting (e.g., annual report, sustainability report, integrated report, company publications, corporate citizenship/corporate social responsibility report, financial report) or corporate website.
- Please ensure that the information needed to mark any of the options is clearly disclosed in the attached documents

Specific requirements for the single-choice selection:

- If your company has disclosed the reporting boundaries or scope of reporting used for your sustainability disclosure, and more than one option can be selected among those in the single-choice section, please consider that a high (75-100%) revenue coverage of a company's sustainability disclosure or an alignment between the financial consolidation and sustainability disclosure are considered best practices and should be used as options.
- If the majority of your revenue is derived from minority (non-consolidated) interests, please use the revenue field to indicate the coverage of your sustainability disclosure. Please also provide a brief description of your minority interests in the comment box of the question, explaining how they have been included in your sustainability disclosure and within the CSA.
- If you have used the revenue field, but the revenue coverage is not explicitly stated in the reporting boundaries section of your sustainability disclosure, please provide the necessary public documents to corroborate the coverage range provided and indicate the necessary calculations in the comment box. For groups and holding companies, this percentage coverage must be calculated against the total revenue reported in the consolidated financial statement.
