Board Accountability

Question

Does the company have practices to ensure the accountability of its board of directors/supervisory board and the alignment with the long-term interests of shareholders?

Rationale

An accountable board of directors is vital for good corporate governance. Studies have found that companies with specific procedures and practices designed to ensure the accountability of their board and a close alignment with shareholders' interests perform better than those that do not. The parameters in this question act as a proxy for the overall effectiveness of the board. This includes meeting attendance, number of external directorships board members hold and performance assessment, which aims to measure the effectiveness of the individual member. To measure accountability, we ask if there are limitations to directors' liability. Shareholders' interests can be protected through mechanisms such as annual elections, not having a classified board and requiring shareholder approval for changes in the bylaws. Key Definitions

This question only applies to board members who represent shareholders (or multiple stakeholders including shareholders). For two-tier board structures, this question should only include the supervisory board and not the management board.

Meeting attendance: This section refers to two measures: on one hand, the actual average attendance rate for the past year, and on the other hand, if there is any corporate guideline for meeting attendance, i.e., if there is a minimum proportion of board meetings that each board member is required to attend. Both rates should be calculated on the basis of the total number of board meetings held annually.

Other mandates: Refers to the number of other external directorships in publicly listed companies held by members of the board of directors/supervisory board (examples include executive board positions such as CEO, or member of the board of directors at another company). Board memberships in private limited companies, educational institutes (schools, colleges, or universities), and non-profit organizations are not considered in our definition of other mandates. Only the number of mandates for independent and non-executive directors should be considered, not mandates for executive directors or employee representatives.

Board performance review: Both self-assessment and independent assessment can be considered for this part., Independent means that an independent third party evaluates the board's performance.

Annual election of board members: Refers to a procedure whereby each board member has to be re-elected at each annual general meeting for shareholders (as opposed to electing a member for multiple years).

CEO succession plan: A plan for who can replace the CEO and by what time the person would be ready to assume the position. This includes a planned and unplanned departure of the CEO. The purpose of this is to ensure a continuation of a company's operation and strategy.

Director liability: Indicates that provisions exist that limit directors' personal liability to the extent allowed by state law (Source: CIQ)
