Board Type

Question

Does the company report on its board type?

Rationale

An effective board of directors, properly constituted, is the linchpin of good corporate governance. Boards are responsible for managerial performance, meeting the corporation's stated objectives, complying with applicable laws and regulations, and protecting shareholder rights and interests. To assess the quality of a board's structure, we focus on its composition, its proportion of independent members, and its overall size, as empirical studies show that oversized boards are counter-productive to performance.

Key Definitions

Types of boards: Companies can choose between one- and two-tier systems when answering this question. The descriptions below will help you identify which of these structures your company has in place.

One-tier systems: These have a single board consisting of executive, non-executive, and independent directors. It is possible that such boards only consist of independent directors or a combination of executive and independent directors. Most countries use a one-tier system.

Two-tier systems: These have an executive board and a supervisory board, which is composed of non-executive or independent members and – in certain countries – employee representatives. Countries that commonly use two-tier systems include Austria, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Hungary, and The Netherlands. Sweden and Norway are exceptions and should be classified as one-tier despite the presence of employee representatives on the board.

For French companies that have a one-tier board system with employee representatives, in accordance with the French code of corporate governance, employee representatives should be considered non-executive directors and be included in the total board size.

Types of directors: We outline definitions of possible types of directors below. These definitions should be used to classify board members. Please note that we only consider board members that are currently (at the time the assessment is performed) on the board, e.g., if a board member resigned in March 2020 and the assessment was performed in May 2020, that board member would not be considered.

Executive directors: These are employees, and usually senior managers of the company in an executive function (e.g., CEO, CFO, etc.).

Independent directors: These are non-executive directors that are independent by meeting the requirements set out in the Board Independence question.

Other non-executive directors: are directors that are not executives and do not qualify as independent as defined above. They are members of the board not already accounted for in the executive and independent categories. They might be employed by the organization at a non-executive level.

Data Requirements

Provide information on board members that are currently (at the time the assessment is performed) in the board. This means that if the board member has resigned from the board (for example in March 2020) and the assessment in performed in May 2020, do not include them as part of the board.

Include board member who has announced her/his resignation but has not yet resigned (at the time the assessment is performed) as part of the board. She/he should not be included if she/he has already resigned at the time the assessment is performed.

A board nominee should not be included as a board member unless she/he has already been elected at the time of the assessment. (A nominee should only be included if she/he sits for re-election, not if she/he's a nominee for a first mandate).

This question is automatically filled out with information from S&P Capital IQ. If any correction is required, please follow these requirements:

- Ensure that the type of board, the breakdown between the different types of directors, and the total board size are filled out.
- If the definition of independence at the company differs from our definition given in the Board Independence question, please adjust the number of independent directors in line with our definition and provide a comment in the comment box.

Specific data requirements for non-listed companies:

Do not provide information on Board of Trustees for this question. This functions differently from a Board of Directors and are usually only present for non-profit entities.

Family-owned companies

- All family members who are on the board of directors and employed by the company are to be considered as executive directors.
- Family members who are only on the board and who do not have any executive role can be considered as independent directors if they meet at least four out of the nine criteria of which at least two of the first three criteria for independence.

State-owned companies

- Government representatives can be considered as "independent" if they meet at least 4 out of 9 criteria of which at least 2 of the first 3 criteria for independence.

Disclosure Requirements

Listed and/or publicly owned companies are required to provide links to public reports or corporate websites.

Non-listed companies are required to provide the following evidence, depending on the type of company:

- Family-owned companies and privately owned companies are required to provide public reports, corporate websites, or internal documents.
- Cooperatives are required to provide public reports, corporate websites, or internal documents.
- State-owned companies are required to report on their corporate governance in the public domain as their key stakeholder is the general public.

Please note: Answers in the form of 'Confidential additional comments' for any type of non-listed company will not be accepted.
