Anti-Bribery & Anti-Corruption Policy

Question

Does the company have a group-wide policy on anti-bribery and anti-corruption and is it available publicly?

Rationale

Corruption and bribery are economic crimes that are consistently harmful to a company's intangible assets (such as its reputation, staff morale, or business relationships). Companies doing business in countries with weak Anti-Bribery & Anti-Corruption laws are exposed to additional reputational and legal risks.

Evidence of corrupt practices can result in a company's exclusion from contracts financed by institutions that blacklist bribe suppliers (for example, the World Bank's list of debarred firms), potentially affecting the company's future earnings. Due to the additional types of risk that corruption introduces, it creates uncertain consequences for investors and therefore increases the risk premium a company must pay for debt or equity. This question assesses the Anti-Bribery & Anti-Corruption policy a company has in place to complement legal requirements (or to compensate for the lack of such requirements in certain countries). Because political and charitable contributions or sponsorship can be used as a subterfuge for bribery, they should be explicitly covered by the anti-corruption policy and should be publicly disclosed.

Key Definitions

Gifts: The term "gifts" includes tendering to a recipient products, services, cash, or cash equivalents (e.g., checks, travelers' checks, gift cards, gift certificates, vouchers, loans and shares) and all business courtesies, gratuities, discounts, favors and other things of value for which the recipient does not pay the fair market value.

Political contributions: This option refers to political contributions that act as means of bribery and corruptions and this needs to be explicitly addressed in the attached policies.

Other aspects related to political contributions that are not linked to bribery and corruption are addressed in other parts of the CSA questionnaire.

Charitable donations or sponsorship: This option specifically considers donations, and sponsorship that act as a means of bribery and corruption, and this needs to be explicitly addressed in the attached policies. In the context of this question, disclosure of details of donations and sponsorship is only considered for topics that are specifically covered in relevant policies, such as the company Codes of Conduct or a separate Anti-Bribery & Anti-Corruption policy.

Other aspects related to charitable donations or sponsorship that are not linked to bribery or corruption are addressed in other parts of the CSA questionnaire.

Training for anti-bribery and anti-corruption: Training that is provided to all employees on anti-bribery and anti-corruption. It should be provided to all employees, not just certain designations or roles.

Established procedures for handling breaches: This option refers to where the policy defines procedures to handle a breach or incident of bribery and corruption, specifically the steps taken after a breach has been reported or identified (e.g. investigation, escalation, and remediation). It should relate to auditing, reviewing, or investigation of allegations. Please note that whistleblowing is covered in a separate question.

Descriptions of breaches, reported incidents, or preventive measures alone do not constitute established procedures for handling breaches; the policy must explicitly outline post-breach response processes.

Corrective or disciplinary actions when there is a breach of the policy: This option refers to a commitment by the company to taking corrective or disciplinary actions in cases of violations of the anti-bribery and anti-corruption policy.

Disclosure Requirements

This question requires supporting evidence from the public domain. The information provided must be included in your public reporting (e.g., anti-bribery and anti-corruption policy, Code of Conduct, annual report, sustainability report, integrated report, corporate citizenship/corporate social responsibility report) or corporate website.

Please ensure that the marked options are both covered by your company's policy and are clearly disclosed in the attached documents.
