Product Adaptation for Emerging Markets (B2C)

Question

Does your company develop and produce specific products for emerging markets that are adapted to meet local basic needs? Please provide examples in the comment box.

Rationale

Companies that adapt their products/services and business strategies to emerging markets are more likely to be successful, as they will meet the needs for a greater group of consumers. This question relates mainly to the concept of the "Base of the Pyramid" (BoP) strategy and aims to identify the suitability of products for low-income population segments in emerging markets and whether these products have been adapted to meet local basic development needs (e.g. fortified nutrition, packaging size, added functionalities).Weare looking to see whether or not companies have adapted their products beyond just appearance and price, while retaining a focus on their core competencies.
