Employee Turnover Rate

Question

Does the company track its employee turnover rate?

Rationale

Human capital is one of the main drivers of corporate growth and plays an essential role in the successful execution of companies' strategies. The employee turnover rate is, therefore, a highly significant management KPI that reflects the ability of a company to retain its employees.

Key Definitions

Total employee turnover: Refers to the proportion of employees who leave an organization over a set period (often a year), expressed as a percentage of the total workforce. The term encompasses all leavers, whether they have left voluntarily or due to dismissal, retirement, or death in service. The figure should be calculated using the total number of employees at the end of the reporting period.

Voluntary employee turnover: Refers to the proportion of employees who choose to leave an organization over a set period (often a year), expressed as a percentage of the total workforce. The figure should be calculated using the total number of employees at the end of the reporting period. It should be noted that retirement and diseases should not be included in the voluntary employee turnover rate.

The average cost of hiring a full-time employee: Refers to the average cost of hiring a new employee to the company in the last fiscal year. The figure should be calculated based on the costs of hiring all new full-time employees in the reporting period (not based on the costs of hiring full-time employees who were already at the company before the last fiscal year started). The average hiring cost of full-time employees includes the amount expended for recruitment including the cost of recruiting new hires, commission fees to recruiting firms and pre-recruiting, salaries of HR people involved, among others. This question seeks to capture the amount of money that your company paid for talent attraction and hiring.
