Lobbying and Trade Associations - Climate Alignment

Question

Does the company have a program to align its lobbying activities with the Paris Agreement?

Rationale

As more and more companies commit to supporting the Paris Agreement with net-zero targets and climate strategies, there is increasing scrutiny from both investors and the public on the extent to which these public commitments are reinforced and not contradicted by the behavior of companies in lobbying. Trade associations can also be a powerful source of influence on public policy. There have been successful shareholder resolutions asking companies to disclose more about their lobbying activities and trade association memberships related to climate change. Companies have a responsibility to ensure their memberships do not contradict their climate strategies and to take action when they do. Aligning lobbying activities and trade association memberships with the Paris Agreement helps protect the reputation of companies and ensure action on climate change is consistent and strong.

This question asks about the processes companies have in place to oversee, review and disclose their climate-related lobbying activities and trade association memberships, and to ensure alignment of these with the Paris Agreement.

Key Definitions

Paris-Aligned lobbying: Lobbying and public policy engagements that are Paris-Aligned are supportive of legislation and regulation that will facilitate the achievement of the Paris Agreement goal to limit global warming to well below 2 degrees Celsius. It could also be referred to as 2-degree or 1.5-degree aligned, science-based, or net-zero by 2050 aligned. Examples of Paris-Aligned lobbying could be supporting measures that promote the growth of renewable energies or supporting the introduction of a carbon price that is aligned with reaching net zero by 2050.

Direct lobbying activities: This encompasses lobbying by either in-house lobbyists or third-party lobbyists paid for or otherwise engaged by the company. Lobbying activities include direct communication and contact with lawmakers or regulatory institutions for the purpose of influencing legislation, as well as responses to consultations and other engagements intended to influence legislation.

Trade associations: may also be referred to as business or industry associations or groups. A trade association is a body, normally with a membership structure that exists to represent the interests of a specific industry. Trade associations can also exist on a cross-industry and national level, for example, a national or regional chamber of commerce.

Review & monitoring process: A systematic process to assess the alignment of lobbying activities with the Paris Agreement. To be considered in this question, the processes must assess alignment with the Paris Agreement (or with the company's stated positions on climate-related legislation and regulation if this is aligned with the Paris Agreement). For direct lobbying activities, the review process ideally takes place before lobbying has been conducted. For trade associations, the review process can take place on a regular basis or whenever new associations are joined and should assess whether or not the trade association supports the Paris Agreement through its lobbying and public policy engagements.

Framework for addressing misalignments: Where misalignments between a trade association's lobbying activities and the goals of the Paris Agreement have been identified, companies should have an established framework for how they deal with this. The framework should include at least two of the following options: public statements distancing the company from the misalignment, engagement with the trade association with clear timelines and an escalation process if unsuccessful, leaving the trade association, or forming proactive coalitions to counter the non-Paris-aligned lobbying.

Data Requirements

This question requires public evidence.

This question can be marked Not Applicable only if all contributions and spending on lobbyists and trade associations are prohibited by law. Please note that evidence must be available in the public domain, and this must apply to all jurisdictions where your company operates in order to be accepted. If only one out of lobbying and trade association memberships is prohibited and not the other, please follow the approach below.

If your company either does not undertake any lobbying activities or is not a member of any trade association, in any jurisdiction, because one or the other is prohibited by law or your company's own code of conduct, and this is clearly stated in the public domain, then the respective options can be ticked under "Review and monitoring process", "Reporting on" and, in the case of no trade association memberships only, "Clear framework for addressing misalignments".
