Certifications of Animal Products

Question

Does the company track its exposure to animal products including the amount used and whether they received certification from one or more independent third parties in the last financial year?

Rationale

In the past decade, the importance of animal welfare has been increasingly recognized in commercial livestock operations. Governments, academic institutions, and animal welfare professionals are addressing animal welfare at different points in the agricultural supply chain, while consumers demand higher standards for food safety and animal welfare. Businesses that address or improve animal welfare are likely to win or retain a competitive advantage in the global marketplace by:

- reducing costs due to reduced animal stress and other welfare benefits, which can lead to increased productivity;
- realizing growing market opportunities for food produced in animal welfare-credential systems; and/or
- becoming the producer of choice for retailers and consumers concerned with animal health and welfare, food safety and quality, human health, and the environment.

With this question, we seek to ascertain animal welfare strategy and performance by assessing the percentage of production or supplies certified to animal welfare standards.

Key Definitions

Animal products: A material that is derived from the body of an animal (e.g., fat, flesh, milk, egg, etc.). including 'by-products' which may not be consumed by people and are instead used for rendering to human and non-human foodstuffs, fats, and other materials that can be sold to make commercial products such as cosmetics, paint, cleaners. Animal products may also feature in feed used for animal production, such as fishmeal, feather meal, etc.

Aquaculture products: Farming of fish, crustaceans, mollusks, aquatic plants, algae, etc. in either fresh- or saltwater environments. Aquaculture also includes mariculture, which specifically refers to farming in offshore environments. Typical aquaculture includes Salmon, Shrimp, Oysters, Seaweed, Tilapia, etc.

Cattle (excl. Dairy): Also referred to as cows/heifer (female) or bulls/steer (male) are livestock commonly raised for meat (beef or veal), dairy, or hides.

Dairy: A product that contains or is made of milk such as yogurt, cheese, and butter. The milk used for dairy products may come from cattle, buffaloes, goats, sheep, or camels.

Swine: Also referred to as pigs, are raised predominantly for meat production (pork). Products next to fresh meat include ham, smoked pork, gammon, bacon, and sausage.

Poultry: Domesticated birds which are kept for meat, egg, or feather production. Types of birds include chickens, ducks, geese, turkeys, quails, guinea fowl, pigeon, etc.

Wild fisheries products: Also referred to as wild capture, are associated with capturing or fishing wild fish or aquatic living organisms for various purposes. Wild fisheries occur in both fresh- and saltwater environments. The most common types include pelagic marine fish (tuna, mackerel, herring, sardines, etc.) and demersal marine fish (e.g., flatfish) but also include mollusks, crustaceans, and other aquatic life.

Critical animal products: The animal products in this question have been selected based on their sensitivity to social and environmental risks which include - but are not limited to - climate change, biodegradation, deforestation, health and safety, human, labor & community rights.

Third-Party Certification: In this question refers to the certificate that was issued by an independent organization based on the company's compliance with pre-defined social and environmental standards related to the sustainable production of a particular agricultural commodity.

Accreditation: Procedure by which a competent authority gives formal recognition that a qualified body or person is competent to carry out specific tasks.

Coverage: The volume/weight or associated procurement spend of a given animal product that is certified or accredited as a percentage (%) of the total volume/weight or procurement spend of said animal product.

Exposure: The production volume/weight or procurement spend of a given animal product as a percentage (%) of total production volume/weight or procurement spend.
