Question

Does the company conduct individual and/or team-based performance appraisals?

Rationale

This question assesses the various methods that companies use to measure performance and how often performance appraisals take place. Appraisals aid the personal development of employees and ensure a holistic approach to team management. They also contribute to skills management and the development of human capital within the organization. Key Definitions

Employees: Refers to full-time and part-time employees.

Management by objectives: Refers to a systematic process in which employees have predefined and measurable goals that are set in a collaborative manner with their line managers on at least a yearly basis together and routinely followed up on.

Multidimensional performance appraisal: Refers to a system in which the employee's performance is assessed using a variety of inputs, not just the targets set by a manager. This can include an assessment of how the employee meets the values and objectives of the department or company, receiving "360-degree" feedback from their peers, direct reports and other employees, and/or client or external feedback.

Team-based performance appraisal: Refers to a system where employees are assessed as part of a team rather than as individuals. It is likely that companies will use a two-pronged approach where, for example, team goals and employees' personal goals are set and weighted accordingly.

Agile conversations: Agile performance management is an unstructured approach to managing employee performance and development throughout the year, as opposed to on an annual or biannual basis. It is collaborative and involves regular conversations and continuous feedback. Agile performance management isn't solely focused on the outcome (i.e., an annual performance outcome or rating). Rather, it is more about the process, which involves regularly readdressing objectives and barriers to effective performance.

Ongoing: Refers to conversations with a superior/manager/senior leader about professional development on a more than quarterly basis. These can be formal reviews and regular check-ins. We also accept information on employee appraisals for companies that are carrying them out for the first time, but the company needs to explicitly state that they will conduct them on an ongoing basis.
