Material Issues for External Stakeholders

Question

Does the company conduct a materiality analysis to identify and value the positive/negative impact on external stakeholders associated with its business operations, products/services and/or its supply chain?

Rationale

This question recognizes companies that identify and value the externalized impact generated on societal stakeholder groups and/or the environment because of their main business activities. The impact evaluated usually related to environmental and/or social externalities can be positive (external benefits) or negative (external costs). The impact generated can be direct, indirect, intended or unintended and are usually not internalized as part of the costs associated with the business activity.

While companies have made significant progress in tracking and reporting input and output measures, such as water use and CO2 emissions, the external social and environmental impact resulting from business operations, products, services or supply chain operations are significantly underreported. Impact valuation helps companies to increase awareness of externalities associated with their business and represents a management tool that can help orient company strategies toward sustainable activities, solutions and sourcing. Investors are also interested in how companies measure and understand their own impact, and how companies use this information in their internal decision-making for long-term value creation. Over time, external impact on society and the environment also translates into internal impact on a company, including its financial value drivers. In a broader understanding of enterprise value to

Key Definitions

Material issue for external stakeholders: The material significance of an environmental, social and governance subject in terms of external impact is defined through an analysis of a company's business activities, business model, products, and services. Impacts are evaluated considering the direct and indirect effect on societal stakeholders and/or the environment- in the short and long term. The material issues for external stakeholders and their associated impact are usually identified by evaluating their breadth, magnitude and the depth of the impact on societal stakeholders and the environment.

Cause of the impact: This refers to the company's operations, products/services, or supply chain activities that are responsible for causing external impacts. The coverage associated with these business activities refers to the share of company operations, products/services, or supply chain activities considered as part of the impact evaluations.

External stakeholders/impact areas evaluated: This refers to the type of external stakeholder group or an external area experiencing the impact caused by the company through its business activities. External groups or areas include the environment, society, consumers/end-users, and external employees (e.g., organizations in its supply chain, or contractors). It is possible to consider the impact on several areas or groups, such as the environment and society or the environment, consumers and society. As this question assess material issues for external stakeholders, information regarding internal stakeholders, such as employees or shareholders is not acceptable.

Topic relevance on external stakeholders: This explains why the external impact assessed is material for the external stakeholder(s) evaluated and requires a clear link between the material issue and the relevance to external stakeholders. The description may also refer to the direct or indirect consequences of the impact generated on societal or environmental stakeholders in terms of size, severity, and/or extent of the damage or benefits caused to societal stakeholders and the environment. The type of impact assessed can be positive, negative, or both. The two impacts reported can be positive or negative but companies are encouraged to assess their external impacts together.

Data Requirements

Please indicate two material issues that illustrate the most significant social or environmental impact on external stakeholder groups (e.g., environment, society, or customers).

Acceptable forms of reporting (inexhaustive) on material issues with externalized impact include:

- Materiality analysis/metrics with the integration of external impact aspects.
- Strategic section of a report or website: Reporting on key strategic areas as part of a sustainability report or website, will only be accepted if there is a clear reference to the external impact dimension, or a detailed explanation of why the issue and associated impact assessed is material to external societal stakeholders or the environment.
- Impact valuation section of a report, website, or a single specific document.

Not acceptable material issues: Please note that companies that do not provide an acceptable material issue for external stakeholders will not receive points on any subsequent aspects of the question. Unacceptable examples include:

- Purely economic or financial issues: tax payments, net income, amortization & depreciation, interests, dividend payments, salaries, own employment, macroeconomic conditions, etc.
- Operational business issues: market expansion, efficient use of capital, operational excellence, etc.
- Material business issues without providing information on why the issue is relevant to external stakeholders
- Impacts from philanthropic activities, or project-based mandatory environmental and social impact assessments.

Disclosure Requirements

All qualitative information required in this question needs to be supported with attached private or public document(s) or a comprehensive company comment. Options that cannot be verified in supporting documents will be unticked.

Additional credit will be granted for relevant publicly available evidence covering the following aspect of the question:

- Topic relevance on external stakeholders
