Lobbying and Trade Associations - Climate Alignment

Question

Does the company have a program to align its lobbying activities with the Paris Agreement?

Rationale

As more companies commit to supporting the Paris Agreement on climate change with net-zero targets and climate strategies, there is increasing scrutiny from investors and the public on how these public commitments are reinforced and whether they are contradicted by the behavior of lobbying companies. Trade associations can also be a powerful influence on public policy. There have been successful shareholder resolutions asking companies to disclose more about their lobbying activities and trade association memberships related to climate change. Companies have a responsibility to ensure their memberships do not contradict their climate strategies and to act if they do. Aligning lobbying activities and trade association memberships with the Paris Agreement helps protect the reputation of companies and ensure action on climate change is consistent and strong.

This question asks about the processes that companies have to oversee, review and disclose their climate-related lobbying activities and trade association memberships, and to ensure alignment of these with the Paris Agreement.

Key Definitions

Paris-aligned lobbying: Paris-aligned lobbying and public policy engagements are supportive of legislation and regulation that facilitate the Paris Agreement's goal to limit global warming to well below 2 degrees Celsius. They could also be referred to as 2-degree or 1.5-degree aligned, science-based, or net-zero by 2050 aligned. Examples of Paris-aligned lobbying could be supporting measures that promote the growth of renewable energies or supporting the introduction of a carbon price that is aligned with reaching net-zero by 2050.

Direct lobbying activities: This encompasses lobbying by in-house lobbyists or third-party lobbyists paid for or otherwise engaged by the company. Lobbying activities include direct communication and contact with lawmakers or regulatory institutions for the purpose of influencing legislation, as well as responses to consultations and other engagements intended to influence legislation.

Trade associations: These may also be referred to as business or industry associations or groups. A trade association is a body, with a membership structure that typically exists to represent the interests of a specific industry. Trade associations can also exist on a cross-industry and national level, (e.g., a national or regional chamber of commerce).

Review & monitoring process: A systematic process to assess the alignment of lobbying activities with the Paris Agreement. To be considered in this question, processes must assess alignment with the Paris Agreement or with the company's stated positions on climate-related legislation and regulation if they are aligned with the Paris Agreement. For direct lobbying activities, the review process ideally takes place before lobbying is conducted. For trade associations, the review process can take place on a regular basis or whenever new associations are joined and should assess whether the trade association supports the Paris Agreement through its lobbying and public policy engagements.

Framework for addressing misalignments: Companies should have an established framework for dealing with misalignments between a trade association's lobbying activities and the goals of the Paris Agreement. The framework should include at least two of the following options: public statements distancing the company from the misalignment, engagement with the trade association with clear timelines and an escalation process if unsuccessful, leaving the trade association, or forming proactive coalitions to counter the non-Paris-aligned lobbying.

Data Requirements

Statement of position on public policies relating to climate change, which is aligned with the Paris Agreement: Please provide information on specific climate change related policy developments (e.g., carbon credits, energy efficiency, decarbonization of specific industries) and indicate whether the company supports or opposes legislation and regulation related to these. Commitment statements are not acceptable here.

This question can be marked "The question is not applicable to the company" only if all contributions and spending on lobbyists and trade associations are prohibited by law. Please note that evidence must be available in the public domain, and this must apply to all jurisdictions where the company operates. If only one of lobbying and trade association memberships is prohibited, please follow the approach below.

If the company does not undertake any lobbying activities or is not a member of any trade association, in any jurisdiction, because one of those factors is prohibited by law or by the company's code of conduct, and this is clearly stated in the public domain, then the respective options can be ticked under "Review and monitoring process", "Reporting on" and, in the case of no trade association memberships only, "Clear framework for addressing misalignments".

If the answer for 'Contributions & Other Spending' or 'Largest Contributions & Expenditures' is "The question is not applicable to the company.", this question should also be marked as "The question is not applicable to the company." since this question covers a subset of policy engagements, lobbying and trade associations, that the other two questions cover.

Disclosure Requirements

This question requires public evidence.
