Human Rights Commitment

Question

Does the company have a group-wide commitment to respect human rights and is it available publicly?

Rationale

The question will identify companies that have an active commitment to respect human rights in their business relationships in line with the UN Guiding Principles or another internationally accepted standard. The policy needs to be company-specific with a company-wide commitment and not just for a single site, business unit, or project.

Following the most recent international developments in the field of corporate non-financial disclosures, we want to know not only the coverage of business human rights policies, but the specific human rights issues considered within them. We also want to know whether the company highlights specific human rights for attention and, whether the commitment is limited to a particular set of rights, encompasses all internationally recognized human rights, or encompasses all internationally recognized human rights but highlights some as needing particular attention according to how the company operates.

This input will reinforce the understanding of a company's approach to human rights, building increased trust with different stakeholders and demonstrating international good business practices.

Key Definitions

Respecting human rights:

- Avoid causing or contributing to adverse human rights impacts through their own activities, and address such impacts when they occur
- Seek to prevent or mitigate adverse human rights impacts directly linked to their operations, products, or services by their business relationships, even if they have not contributed to those impacts.

Suppliers: Include brokers, consultants, contractors, distributors, franchisees or licensees, home workers, independent contractors, manufacturers, primary producers, sub-contractors, and wholesalers.

Partners: Include agents, lobbyists and other intermediaries, joint venture and consortia partners, governments, customers, clients, and local communities.

Human trafficking: The recruitment, transport, transfer, harboring, or receipt of a person by such means as threat or use of force or other forms of coercion, abduction, fraud, or deception for the purpose of exploitation.

Forced labor: Forced labor is work performed involuntarily and under the menace of any penalty. It refers to situations where people are coerced to work through the use of violence or intimidation, or by more subtle means such as manipulated debt, retention of identity papers, or threats of denunciation to immigration authorities.

Child labor: Work that deprives children of their childhood, their potential and their dignity, and that is harmful to physical and mental development. It refers to work that:

- Is mentally, physically, socially, or morally dangerous and harmful to children
- Interferes with their schooling by depriving them of the opportunity to attend school; obliging them to leave school prematurely; or requiring them to attempt to combine school attendance with excessively long and heavy work.

Freedom of association: The right of workers and employers to form and join organizations of their own choosing

Right to collective bargaining: The right of workers to bargain freely with employers is an essential element in freedom of association. Collective bargaining is when employers and workers discuss and negotiate their relations voluntarily, in particular terms and conditions of work.

Right to non-discrimination: The principle of non-discrimination seeks to guarantee that human rights are exercised without discrimination of any kind based on race, color, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth, disability, age, marital and family status, sexual orientation and gender identity, health status, place of residence, economic and social situation.

Data Requirements

Only referring to or being a signatory to external entities such as the UN Global Compact (UNGC) or International Labour Organization (ILO) is not sufficient for the statement of commitment. A letter from the company to the UNGC is also not sufficient. We require a company-specific statement of commitment.

Commitment should make reference to an international standard such as UN guiding principles on business and human rights, the OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises. The company must say something about the precise standards followed.

Also, modern slavery statements won't be accepted as human rights commitments.

1. Commitment to respect human rights in accordance with internationally accepted standards:

Not acceptable:

- Complying with labor laws (e.g., US Equal Employment Opportunity regulations)
- Being aware of the UN guiding principles- General statements about respecting human rights
- Statements referring to not supporting one aspect of human rights (e.g., we do not support child labor)
- Only examples of initiatives are provided

Disclosure Requirements

The policy commitment may take the form of a single, stand-alone public policy regarding respect for human rights, or be included in a broader document, such as a code of ethics, code of conduct or business principles.

Scattered pieces of information (i.e., information not specific to Human Rights or reported in a diffuse / disconnected manner) won't be accepted as commitments.

A brief and general statement from the company saying that it respects human rights will not suffice.

The documentation is accepted as policy/commitment if it is on corporate level and:

- A dedicated policy
- A strategy section in the reporting

The documentation is not acceptable as policy/commitment if it is not on corporate level (i.e., one site or business unit) and/or:

- Unspecific and scattered pieces of information
- Information on a (pilot) project
- A case study
- Information on compliance with GRI or equivalent reporting requirements

This question requires supporting evidence from the public domain. The information provided has to be included in the company's public reporting (e.g., annual report, sustainability report, integrated report, company publications) or corporate website.
